LEONIE BENNETT Jeweller

After a career in publishing, I studied fine art at Oxford Brookes before working alongside experienced jewellers in Oxford and London.

My aim is to create fine jewellery for everyday wear. The main body of my work combines silver and gold. When the silver is oxidised, the result is a distinctive contrast of black and gold. More recently, I have taken my work in a new direction, using enamel to introduce vibrant colour.

Many of my pieces are one-off; others are produced in a limited range. Every piece is made with meticulous care and attention to detail.
